9:15-10:30am	Plenary Key note &amp; round table  'Sustainable Leadership - the Power of Shared Purpose'  Sander Tideman , Executive Director Garrison Institute, NL  Sander Tideman has maintained a friendship with the Dalai Lama since he was a student of international law aged 23. While developing his career in law, finance, social enterprise and academia, the Dalai Lama continued to be a guide for his personal development, which guidance also greatly influenced his views on leadership and systems change. Sander will share his personal journey with you in his lecture, exploring the type of leadership that is needed for leaders to be successful in the face of today's social and environmental challenges. This leadership goes under a number of names: collective leadership, compassionate leadership, systemic leadership and sustainable leadership. We have chosen the last name: sustainable leadership. In a decade of research at various Universities and many case studies in business, government and civil society, we have distilled an integrative model for this leadership, which we call sustainable leadership. The work has been inspired by conversations with H.H. the Dalai Lama, who derived his views from Buddhist philosophy and practice. In that spirit, the model of sustainable leadership is both a theory and a practice which can be trained and cultivated, regardless of rank or hierarchy. It is unique because it integrates insights from both ancient wisdom traditions and cutting-edge insights from neuro-science, psychology and systems thinking.  S.G.
